Letter to the Editor

It appears as though legislation will be introduced at the next session of the Virginia General Assembly which would put our State government in the position of operating and promoting a State "lottery."

The recent Legislative subcommittee hearings have been very disappointing, and have been noted by the lack of objectivity from the chairman. There also has been much confusion at the hearings because of the lack of understanding between the different kinds of gambling.

It seems to me that an understanding of the different kinds of gambling would help to the confusion. Other than illegal gambling, there are three different types of gambling: first, there is social gambling, which is personal in nature, such as a bet on a golf game or between individuals on a sports event, bingo, etc.; the second type is state-regulated such as pari-mutual betting at race tracks, where private enterprise runs the operation and the State takes a certain percentage of the money that is bet; and the third type of gambling is State-sponsored gambling such as the "lottery", where the State government actually becomes the promoter of gambling.

There are a couple of reasons why the government of the State of Virginia should not get involved in gambling. First, this type of operation is now illegal in the State (it is known as the "numbers" game) and there are people in prison for being involved in "numbers". The argument that legalizing lotteries would drive out the "numbers" operation has not been substantiated by anyone yet. That same argument was used in the State of New York to legalize Off Track Betting (OTBN) parlors. The hope was that illegal gambling and "bookies" would be driven out of business. Not only were they not driven out of business, but in 1972 illegal gambling had increased approximately 62% (reported by the New York City crime control bureau).

If the lottery legislation is passed this would mean that our State government would no longer be in a neutral position concerning the moral issue of gambling. It, in fact, would be doing just the opposite by using the promoter of lotteries and encouraging its citizens to participate in gambling. (The State would receive 50% of the money bet with the other 50% going to the winners of the lottery.) It is one thing for individuals to bet on a private basis, but a totally different situation altogether when the State government loses its neutrality by becoming the promoter of gambling.

Another reason for objecting to the "lottery" being approved by the General Assembly is that if it passes it will open up the door to the passage of the pari - mutual gambling bill, which our Attorney General has come out against because of the dangers of organized crime. It has been reported that of the 13 states which now have a state lottery, all 13 also have pari-mutual gambling.

In closing, it seems to me that the State of Virginia has no business being in the business of promoting gambling no matter what the rewards. It's still a tax no matter which way you look at it and it taxes those who can least afford it. It also communicates the "something for nothing" philosophy, which has been part of the downfall of every civilization.

I hope that the citizens of the State of Virginia, who agree with me, will let their elected representatives know how they feel about this pending legislation.

Sincerely,
Chuck Mottley, Chairman
The Va. Organization Against Government Gambling

EDITOR'S NOTE: Veterans and their families are asking thousands of questions concerning the benefits their Government provides for them through the Veterans Administration. Below are some representative queries. Additional information may be obtained at any VA office.

Q - I'm a service disabled veteran with Veterans Administration Mortgage Life Insurance coverage on a specially adapted home. How long will I be protected under this coverage?

A - Until the mortgage is paid off, the home is sold, or until you reach age 70.

Q - I was just discharged from military service and plan to study under the GI Bill. How long do I have to complete training?

A - A law enacted in July 1974 extended GI Bill eligibility for veterans from 8 to 10 years after date of discharge. The extension also applies to eligible spouses, widows and widowers of veterans who train under the Veterans Administration Dependents' Educational Assistance program.

Q - I draw Veterans Administration compensation for a service-connected disability. Am I entitled to the agency's $150 annual clothing allowance?

A - Your eligibility would depend upon the nature of your disability. You are eligible if you wear one or more prosthetic or orthopedic devices which tend to wear out or tear your clothing. You must apply for the benefit, however.
